To be signed by all team members: This says you're not violating patent or copyright and that the University of Maryland can use the video.

To the best of my knowledge, the content of the video (a) does not violate any obligations of confidentiality or the terms of any sponsored research agreement or grant; (b) does not breach the confidentiality of or policies regarding human subjects research; (c) does not infringe the copyright, patent or proprietary rights of any third party or the University; and (d) does not qualify as a publication for purposes of patenting.

As the creators of the video, we collectively grant the University of Maryland a free right to reproduce and publicly perform the video, publicly display frames from the video, and distribute and make derivative works based on the video in connection with University sponsored or endorsed programs and activities, including public relations and recruiting efforts, provided that when practicable, the University acknowledges us as the creators. The University retains ownership of the physical copy of the video. (All group members must sign and date below)
